REPUBLICAN TICKET.

Election, Tuesday, Nov. 7th.

CONGRESSIONAL TICKET.

For Congress First District—
CHARLES G. WILLIAMS, of Rock.

SENATORIAL TICKET.

For State Senator 15th District
S. L. LORD, of Fulton.

COUNTY TICKET.

For Sheriff
R. B. HARPER, of Spring Valley.

For Register of Deeds
CHARLES L. VALENTINE, of Janesville.

For Clerk of the Court
A. W. BALDWIN, of Milton.

For County Treasurer
WILLIS MILES, of Janesville.

For County Clerk—
SYLVESTER MORGAN, of Lima.

For District Attorney
JOHN W. SALE, of Janesville.

For County Surveyor
EDWARD RUGER, of Harmony.

For Coroner
R. L. COLVIN, of Janesville.

It will be seen by reading New York politics, that Mr. Tilden is still alive.

The corn crop and the fairs have had a splendid week of fine weather. Both are on the boom.

Mr. Sumner, who has been nominated for Congress by the West Bend Democrats, has a wife who is his law partner. The women will want to know whether she gets half the profits of the firm.

When the Democrats in Ohio forced the Sunday question on the people, and made an issue against keeping Sunday at all, they found they made a mistake, and their orators have ceased to discuss it.

The only redeeming feature of the star route business, is that Rerdell and Miner, who have been convicted will have a new trial. The conviction of the little thieves and the non-conviction of the big ones, was more than Judge Wylie could stand.

Mr. Alexander C. Botkin, of this State, and formerly editor of the Milwaukee Sentinel, is United States Marshal for Montana, and a few days ago the Republicans of that Territory nominated him as a delegate to Congress. Under these circumstances it is a pity the Territory is Democratic.

BRAGG AND DEFEAT.

The result of the West Bend Convention does not give General Bragg or his friends any comfort. Two of their men too who had declared they would stay by the General till snow fell—got seduced, and on the 100st ballot, the 14 Delaney men and these two Bragg delegates, voted for Sumner of Waukesha, and he was nominated. It is said that Delegate Deissner, of Waukesha county, was the first to suggest a break on the part of the Bragg men. He is severely censured by the friends of General Bragg, but he defends his action on the ground that the nomination of either Bragg or Delaney was an utter impossibility, and the earlier a break was made for a new man the better.

The bitter feeling among the friends of Bragg will soon pass away, and no doubt Mr. Sumner will receive the united support of the Democrats of the Second district. General Bragg will not run independent, at least he made a speech after the Convention, which strongly indicated that he would give the nominee his hearty support. But the General doesn't like to be crushed by a man like Delaney, neither does he take it with altogether good grace to be defeated by a man like D. H. Sumner. General Bragg has made a conspicuous member of Congress, and in his congressional course of six years, has done much which can be placed to his credit, especially fighting against rebel claims, but for all this he is paid off with a defeat which is as humiliating as it is unjust. There is hardly a Democrat in the Second district who can feel proud over what the Democratic Convention has done.

JANESVILLE AND BELOIT.

The Gazette very timely and wisely rebuked the attempt of certain ones in Janesville to arouse a bitter feeling between this city and Beloit, and the course we took in the matter has been very warmly endorsed by the Republicans of Janesville. A spirit that would involve the two cities in a quarrel, either between newspapers, business interests, or between Republicans, is a spirit that should receive the condemnation of every man of honor in both cities. So far as the material interests of these places are concerned, we want a spirit of harmony and good will always dwelling among the business men; and in regard to politics, common sense will dictate that there should be but one sentiment respecting the support of any Republican candidate when he has been fairly nominated. There is not only strength in unity of action, but there is common justice as well, and no one who has any sort of regard for the party or its principles, should engage in the dirty work of throwing mud at Beloit Republicans simply because they demanded fair play in a convention.

One city should rejoice in the prosperity of the other. They should march along side by side in all business interests; and in political matters there should be no rivalry among the Republicans except that in one striving to outdo the other in zeal for the success and support of all worthy party nominations. The Gazette says this much because there is occassion for saying it. This is a time when Republicans should be in harness together, when hard work should be done, and when good feeling and harmony should be one of the blessings which the Republican party enjoys.

OFFICERS OF THE STATE AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY.

There will be a unanimous good feeling among the friends of the State Agricultural Society, that the Hon. N. D. Fratt, of Racine, has been reelected president of the society. There probably is no prominent man in the State who takes a deeper and a more unselfish interest in the affairs of the society than Mr. Fratt. His practical and extensive knowledge of agriculture, and his decided executive ability, eminently qualify him for the responsible position with which the society has again honored him. He has been so faithful to his duties and has given the society so much encouragement and valuable service, that there will be general rejoicing that he will continue to be president.

Inasmuch as General George E. Bryant was not in a position where he could again accept the secretaryship of the society, the choice fell upon Mr. Clinton Babbitt, of Beloit, and there are many hundreds in Rock county, who will heartily congratulate both the Agricultural Society and Mr. Babbett, because of his election as secretary. He is an experienced farmer, has always taken a deep interest in the work of the society, and in all other respects he is admirably qualified to the laborious position of secretary. We could not point out another man in Southern Wisconsin who more deserved this mark of honor, or who would make a more faithful and efficient secretary than Mr. Babbett, and his friends and they are numbered by the hundreds here and elsewhere, will give him their endorsement and a helping hand.

Mr. Cyrus Miner, of Janesville, has been treasurer of the society for a number of years, and his modesty and unselfishness rather suggested that he should retire from holding the purse strings. But through all the terms of office which Mr. Miner had filled he had been so faithful to his trust, and so deep in sympathy with the interests of the society, that there was not one who wanted to make a change, and he was unanimously urged to accept the office again, which he did. This confidence which the society placed in him is an endorsement that he has won by the most efficient service.

THE MONROE CONVENTION AND THE RESULT.

The outcome of the Monroe Republican Congressional Convention is worse than the result of the West Bend Democratic Convention. At the later place, the Convention nominated a third man and this laid Bragg and Delaney aside, but at Monroe, the situation is not so pleasant, as this time the blundering has been done by the Republicans. Through the treachery and base cunning of the fellow Stickney from Dane county Hazelton was able to organize the Convention in his own interest. When this was done, the mischief had been accomplished. It was an outrage altogether too gross to be countenanced by honest men, and when the Keyes men saw that they had been slaughtered in the house of their friends, they appealed to the Convention for simple square dealing and common honesty: but it seems that the Hazelton men wanted nothing to do with either fair play or honesty, and they were determined to give Keyes no rights in that Convention.

When the Hazelton men refused to right the wrong or allow Keyes any redress for the infamy that had been perpetrated, the Keyes delegates withdrew from the Convention. This forenoon they adopted a resolution and sent it to the Hazelton men asking unity and a third candidate which would be acceptable to both factions. This was refused, whereupon, the Keyes men unanimously nominated E. W. Keyes, the Hazelton men having previously nominated Hazelton, and both Conventions adjourned.

This is an unfortunate result, for the very reason that if both candidates remain in the field, both will be defeated and a Democrat elected. The abominable treachery of Stickney should not have been countenanced not even by the Hazelton men, and when such a piece of political and personal perfidy had been brought to the surface, Hazelton should have scorned the villainous act, and had nothing to do with it. A man of unshaken integrity and of high moral character, one who counts honor of more value than office, would look with righteous contempt on any man who would sink so low as to betray a friend and become a Judas Iscariot. But Mr. Hazelton's eagerness for a renomination and the blind enthusiasm of his friends, caused both him and them to receive the modern Judas with open arms and with cheers. It will not pay Mr. Hazelton to accept a nomination under these circumstances. It would have been better had he withdrawn from the contest and a new man taken up, than to have the stigma attached to him of being a party to a base piece of treachery.

We hope that Mr. Hazelton will think better of this when he gets home, and conclude to choose the name of an honest man, rather than a nomination for Congress, gotten by the trick and perfidy of one who is beneath contempt.

HANGED.

James Tracey Dropped by the Hangman's Rope in Chicago.

The Doomed Man Protesting Innocence to the Last.

Incidents of Tracey's Last Moments on Earth.

His Careless Farewells to the Boy Prisoners.

CHICAGO, Sept. 16.—James Tracey was hung in the county jail at 2:34 o'clock yesterday afternoon for the murder of Police Officer John Huebner.

TRACEY'S LAST HOURS OF LIFE.

Tracey's last night on earth was spent very quietly. At his request Bailiff Rohn, of the criminal court, to whom he had taken a great liking, was assigned the duty of watching the condemned man. From 5 o'clock to 9 he was left alone in his cell in the boys' department, where he had been removed out of hearing of the noise made in preparing the scaffold, spending most of the time in writing. At 9 o'clock Father Dowling visited the doomed man, and spent two hours in devotions with him. When Father Dowling left the jail at 11 o'clock he said that Tracey had requested that no one be allowed to see him. He had not slept for two nights, and was physically exhausted, but was cheerful and resigned and showed no signs of fear. During the evening Sheriff Mann received a letter from Tracey written in a firm, business-like hand, requesting as a favor to a dying man that his dearest friend, a young man named N. H. Derbin, should be permitted to see him just before or just after the execution.

Shortly after midnight a reporter visited Tracey in his cell. A beautiful floral piece representing "The Gates Ajar," with the words "I Trust in God" and "Farewell" traced in Heliotrope upon a background of white flowers, was placed in the cell, being a gift from Tracey's friend Derbin. Tracey spoke about his fate with deep feeling.

"I will say as my dying declaration," said Tracey, "that I am an innocent man," he exclaimed. "The press have had a good deal to say about my 'dying game' and all that. Such statements hurt me, for they imply that I intend to meet my fate as a bravado. It is true a man can die but once, and it matters little how or when, but it is not bravado that makes me feel calm as the end approaches. It is a consciousness of innocence that sustains me. My conviction was the result of a conspiracy. The evidence of a woman, the willing tool of the detectives, is what sends me to the scaffold—testimony that was perjury from beginning to end."

After discussing the evidence for some time he said: "I do not fear death, for I am no murderer, but I hate to be a scape-goat and die just to appease public opinion. As for my murderers, they will one day be tried before a fair tribunal and an impartial judge. There can be no packing of the jury in that court, and no eloquence or quibble of the law can save them from the punishment which they merit."

Between 8 and 9 o'clock in the morning, in company with Bailiff Rohn, Tracey made a tour of the jail corridors, and bade the prisoners good-by in their cells. His tone was cheerful and the clasp of his hand was firm. All the time he smoked a cigar with apparent enjoyment. Those with whom he took his final leave were much more affected than was the man about to die. His walk through the jail took him past the gallows which was waiting to take his life. Smiling, he took hold of one of the posts and attempted to shake it. Its strength was evidently satisfactory, and he said: "Oh, I think that will hold me." Returning through the jail office shortly after 9 o'clock, he was led to the jail dispensary, where he held something very much like a reception to a small party of reporters and others. He was an entertaining companion during those moments. Being asked by Bailiff Rohn if he wished to remove his coat before being taken to the scaffold, he said: "No, I'm afraid I'll catch cold." For half an hour or more he was engaged in writing his autograph, the date of his sentence, July 8, 1882, and of his execution, upon cards, as presents to his friends and acquaintances. While engaged in writing, Charles Huebner, brother of the murdered policeman, came into the room, and gazed intently at Tracey from behind for several moments. He left the room again without having said a word.

Tracey's coolness was remarkable. Having written his autograph on a large number of cards, he called Sheriff Mann to his side and gave him instructions about distributing the mementoes. At ten o'clock Rev. Father Dowling arrived and had a few words of private conversation with the doomed man. Then Mr. James McCann, the old gentleman who, with his three sons and one daughter, tried to establish an alibi, came in and greeted the prisoner. Tracey had been expecting him all the morning, and received him cordially. Tracey told him that he had willed his body to him after death.

Shortly after ten o'clock Tracey's highest esteemed friend, N. H. Derbin, arrived at the jail with a basket of tuberoses and other flowers. He was allowed to speak with Tracey some moments later, and a quiet conversation, apparently affecting to both, followed between them.

Rev. Father Dowling expressed himself privately as very well satisfied with Tracey's spiritual condition, having given him comforting signs of peace and hope for what is to come after death. A little before eleven o'clock Tracy retired to his cell in order to arrange his possessions for division among his friends.

On returning to the dispensary through the boys' department, he bade the little prisoners farewell in a few careless words, such as, "Well, so long. Good-by kids." In the dispensary he had a long private talk with Detective Dennis Simmons, who was an old acquaintance of his. The officer was affected to tears, and Tracey's eyes became dim and watery for the first time in anyone's sight since his death on the gallows became a certain thing. At the close of this conversation Tracey was engaged for some time in hastily writing notes to several friends, in which he willed each small articles as mementoes of him.

At 11 o'clock everyone was excluded from the room with Tracey except his priest and his careful watchers, Bailiffs Rohn and Olson, who were his constant companions during his last night and day.

For half an hour or more, between 11 and 12 o'clock, the doomed man walked alone in the south corridor, occasionally exchanging a few words with his guards. He was without his coat and smoking a cigar. As the moments went by he began to show very evident signs of nervousness. His hands trembled, and his walk backward and forward was unsteady. this brief season was the only time during the day that he had a chance for private thought.

At 11:35 Tracey's dinner was brought to him in the corridor. It consisted, as he had ordered, of half a dozen fried eggs, toast, a roll, and a cup of coffee. He partook of these with an apparent relish. While he was eating, Sheriff Mann received the following telegram:

"SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Sept. 15., 11:50 o'clock.—Sheriff Cook county: The governor refuses to interfere with Tracey's sentence. Inform him immediately. RICHARD PENDERGAST."

This news, which destroyed the last hope of the prisoner and his friends for official interference, was communicated at once to Tracey by Sheriff Mann. He received it quietly, merely saying that he had been satisfied from the start that the governor would do nothing for him.

By noon all preparations for the execution had been completed. For the next hour or more time hung somewhat heavily on the hands of the sheriff and his men, who had been so full of hustle throughout the morning. Crowds of curious people began to gather about the building. Only those holding invitations from the sheriff were admitted to the inner yard of the jail, and even these were refused admittance to the jail itself until 1 o'clock, the hour specified upon their cards of invitation.

Tracey passed the two last hours of his life sitting in the dispensary in conversation with Rev. Father Dowling and two or three intimate friends, whose company he desired. None others were admitted to him. Throughout the morning he had discoursed with various persons upon the crime with which he was charged and his trial. To all he declared his innocence. As Clerk Bell, who had heard his trial, shook hands with him in leave-taking, he said, "You know you have a reasonable doubt of my guilt." To others he expressed a belief that many of those about him had a secret doubt of his guilt that they would not reveal.

Shortly before 1 o'clock the reporters of the city papers were admitted to say farewell to Tracey. He shook hands with each one in turn, saying, "Good-by. Do me justice. I die innocent before my Maker. A few minutes more and I am there." With the last words his eyes filled with tears and his voice failed him.

ALMOST THE END.

From 1 o'clock, when the jail doors were opened for the admission of persons bearing invitations, until the moment of the execution, a constant stream of people kept pouring in until the north hall of the jail back of the reporters' tables and the seats of the jurymen was densely crowded with curious spectators. The corridors above were black with curious officials. There was little impressiveness about the gathering. The crowd talked busily and some of its members smoked. The empty scaffold at the east end of the hall was stared at, but its plain timbers had little that was gloomy or even interesting about them. The two-inched rope which hung from the crossbeam was the only thing that had a really sinister appearance.

As the hour of 2 o'clock approached the noise was hushed. Conversation almost died away, and every one gazed intently at the place of the corridor where Tracey was to first come in sight on his way to the gallows. The final hour of his life Tracey passed alone with Rev. Father Dowling. At 1:30 o'clock he was brought into the office of the jail, pale but firm, and listened quietly to his death-warrant, which was read to him by Sheriff Mann. At the close or the impressive reading the procession was formed by the sheriff and Jailer Folz. Tracey was attired for his execution in a black suit of clothes, and had a white necktie. His pulse was beating at the rate of 140, and Dr. Brutherdt expressed fears that he would faint when led to the execution. At 1:55 the procession appeared in the corridors, and a second later reached the scaffold. Tracey was in front of the side of Sheriff Mann. His arms were pinioned, but his form was erect and steady. Jailer Folz, Father Dowling, and two other priests, Clerk Bell and Bailiff Carlin brought up the rear. As soon as the platform was reached the death-service was begun by the priests. Tracey made his responses in a firm tone gazing on a crucifix which he held in his hand. At the close of this Sheriff Mann asked the prisoner if he had any exceptions to make to the death-sentence he had heard read. He said he had not. The sheriff then told him to make his last statement, if he had any to make. With that Tracey took a step forward and said:

"Gentlemen, all that I can say is that I am innocent of the crime of which I am charged. Any man standing where I do would confess if guilty. The truth is mighty and will prevail. I am ready."

Sheriff Mann placed the rope around his neck and Jailer Folz adjusted the knot. His arms and legs were pinioned, a white garment placed on him and a white cap drawn over his eyes. He was repeating his prayers steadily. At 2:01 o'clock the drop was sprung and the body dropped four and a half feet. It turned slowly around. There were two or three weak struggles and all was still. Drs. Brutherdt and Hutchinson stepped up and felt the pulse. Two minutes after the drop fell the pulse was 140; four minutes after it was 120, irregular and feeble. Five minutes after the hanging pulsation ceased. The heart beat feebly ten minutes longer and then stopped forever. A few minutes later the body was cut down.

THE CRIME.

Tracey was a professional burglar. He had served one term in the Illinois penitentiary for burglary at Quincy. After his term expired he was associated in burglaries in and around St. Joseph, Mich., Wyandotte, Kas., and Kansas City, Mo., as well as in and around Chicago. Tracey has also served out a short term of confinement in a Missouri prison. The murderer's real name is supposed to have been James Restinbrook. He was an Irishman, five feet ten inches high, and rather slender. He had a quick, nervous manner, and talked rapidly, seldom looking one in the face. His features were sharp, his eyes small and blue in color, and he wore a heavy, red mustache.

Tracy died for a crime committed between 3 and 3 o'clock on the morning of Feb. 5 last. About 2 o'clock that morning a family named Glazier, living at 5 Bauwans street, who had been sitting up with a sick woman, discovered two burglars preparing to enter the house next door. They stood in the broad moonlight, within a few feet of the window, and the people watching could see them plainly. One was a tall man and the other a shorter one. The shorter burglar took off his shoes and went up the back steps and began to work at the door. The other stood guard below. Two women of the Glazier family went into a dark room and watched the burglar on guard. His face was within ten inches of the windowpane, through which they looked at him, standing in the moonlight. While they watched, the man of the family stole down the back steps and fired at him. The startled burglar returned the shot with one from his own revolver, and he and the other burglar then ran away. Several policemen heard the shots and came running toward the spot. Officers Kearns and Foley met the burglars running east across a vacant lot from Ashland avenue. On seeing the officers they ran down an alley toward the south, hotly pursued by the policemen, who fired several shots as they ran. The fugitives crossed several vacant lots to the east, dropping their plunder as they went, and, while running from Dixon street to Holt avenue, the officers lost sight of them. Just before reaching Holt avenue, near Bradley street, the burglars ran into the arms of Officer John Huebner, who was coming in haste, attracted by the firing. Officer Huebner seized the smaller one and threw him down. Immediately the other one turned and fired two shots at him, one of which took effect in his left arm and right shoulder and the other in the abdomen. The burglars then escaped. Huebner's fellow-officers came up a moment later, and by them he was carried to his home on Paulina street, where he died twenty-four hours afterward from the effect of his wounds.

Within a few hours after the fatal shooting the city detectives had obtained a description of the murderers from the Glazier women, who declared that they should recognize the taller one among a hundred if they saw him again. The other one they had only seen at a distance and they did not think they could recognize him if they should see him. During the next ten days nearly a dozen crooked men were arrested and brought before the women, who pronounced them all not the men. Finally, on Feb. 14, Tracey and Rock were arrested as filling the description of the murderers. Each was found to carry a revolver, and Tracey, in addition, had a pocketful of burglars' tools. When the Glazier women saw Tracey they recognized him instantly as the tall burglar. He was tried and condemned on the 8th of July last.

New Trial Granted for Miner and Rerdell.

Wordy War Between Lawyers Merrick and Henkle.

The Government Charged With Spotting Jurors.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 15.—The verdict in the case of Miner and Rerdell has been set aside and they have been granted a new trial. Henkle, counsel for Miner, has filed various affidavits upon which he based the motion for a new trial. Merrick said: "I find some motions on file for a new trial in the case by the convicted defendants, accompanied by statements of a variety of reasons and by some affidavits. Among the reasons is one, namely that the verdict is in itself unreasonable. As counsel for the government of the United States, I am not disposed to put on file a consent to the granting of this motion, but as counsel for the United States I feel it my duty not to oppose it. The government of the United States itself is not entirely satisfied, by any means, with the verdict. It is a verdict which subjects masters to retreat before convicts, servants and minions. The jury presumably found evidence of conspiracy to defraud the United States, and of an overt act, so as to create completed crime under the statutes of the United States. That having been found by the jury prior to their determination of conviction of guilty against Rerdell and Miner, there was left for them sole inquiry as to who was in the conspiracy. It was apparent to all men that deeply guilty in point of morals and laws as Rerdell and Miner are, the crime they perpetrated was a scheme and device of the others. Now, sir, the government of the United States cannot consistently, with its dignity object by practical resistance to the motion made to set aside such a verdict, and bring to trial again both masters and servants in order that full justice may be done. The government of the United States seeks no victim. It seeks simply justice, and when a verdict apparently trifles with justice, it cannot meet the approval of the government of the United States.

Henkle then read the grounds upon which he based the motion for a new trial, and then read Foreman Dickson's sworn statement, which has already been published. The court stated he had directed the jury not to converse on the subject of alleged bribery. Whether or not the jury had transgressed the rule laid down by the court did not appear from Dickson's affidavit.

Henkle proceeded to argue that the verdict should be set aside on the ground that the jury had been tampered with, and in conclusion said the court-room was dotted all over with spotters whose business it was to shadow jurors, counsel, and witnesses, and some of the vilest men in this community were right here, all through this trial, doing that very thing in the service of the government.

Merrick—Is the service of the government?

Henkle—Yes, sir.

Merrick—Is there any affidavit of this sort on file?

Henkle—I have not any proof of this now, but I will furnish it when we get to investigating the matter.

Merrick—When we come to investigate the matter we will reach the conclusion that this approach of Dickson was a "get-up" thing on the defendants' side.

The court then said: As to the misconduct of the jury, both sides concede that the discussion as to the bribery matter took place in the jury-room. In the circumstances of the case, considering the rather incoherent character of this verdict, I think it will be safe for the court to assume what is conceded by counsel on both sides to have taken place in the jury-room, and I will award a new trial.

Tolriner, one of the jurors, happening to be in the court-room, was called to the witness stand and testified to the reading of the statement by Dickson after the retirement of the jury. He said the jury voted in the affirmative upon the question as to whether the paper should be read.

The court—What I wanted to know was, whether the jury had violated the directions of the court. The verdict of guilty, then, as to Rerdell and Miner, is set aside, not only on account of the misconduct of the jury, but I may say on account of the general unreasonableness, not that the court would have made this decision on that ground alone, because the unreasonableness of a verdict is for the jury, rather than the court, unless the unreasonableness should shock the court.

A Great Fire in Toledo.

TOLEDO, Ohio, Sept. 16.—Fire broke out in the extensive lumber mill of the Mitchell & Rowland Lumber company, entirely destroying it. The fire also spread to the large piles of lumber with which the yards were filled, and, before the flames were checked, thirteen to fourteen million feet of lumber were consumed. The loss on the mill is $100,000; insured for $50,000. The loss on the lumber is $250,000, which is covered by insurance. Nearly all the insurance companies represented here are interested in these losses.

The Week's Failures.

NEW YORK, Sept. 16.—The failures for the past seven days reported to New York were 198, of which 101 occurred in the country generally and seven in New York city. The principal failure in New York was that of Cecil Rowson, produce commission, due to the Jurry in land. It is thought he will soon resume.

Robeson Renominated.

CAMDEN, N. J., Sept. 16.—The Republicans of the First district renominated George M. Robeson for congress by acclamation.

Executed.

METROPOLIS, Ill., Sept. 16.—Samuel Redding, a negro, was executed here yesterday for the murder of Adolphus Zimmerman.

Chicago Markets.

CHICAGO, Sept. 15.—The markets were rather quiet. Wheat was reported steady in Liverpool, the receipts being moderate and shipments larger, the latter being increased by the desire of shippers to get advantage of increased marine insurance, which goes into effect to-day, but there was not much disposition to trade, the bears not being willing to sell the long options while September is at a premium of ¾c to 5c over October, and the quotations were confined to a narrow range, closing at nearly the lowest prices. Corn opened ½c lower, declined ½c further, but the decline brought out a good demand to cover shorts, prices advanced 1¼ to 1¾c on September and October, and ½ to ¾c on the long options, and was active, but very irregular, closing about ⅝ to ¾c below the highest prices of the day. Oats declined ½c, but the loss was recovered and market more active, closing at about the highest prices. Pork was moderately active, declined 20 to 22½c from the last sales on yesterday for seller October, but again advanced 30 to 35c under a good demand, and closed at nearly the highest prices of the season. Lard opened weak, but a strong feeling was soon developed, advanced 17½ to 20c per 100 lbs. and closed at about the highest prices. Short rib sides were firm and 10 to 12½c higher on the long options.

CLOSING PRICES.

Rye firmer, 85¾c October.

Oats steady, at 30¾ to 31c September, 30¾ to 31c October, 30⅝ to 30¾c November, 30½c year, 32¾c to 33c May.

Regular wheat firm, at 93½c September, 93¾ to 94¾c October, 96¾ to 96¾c November, 91¾ to 93¼c year.

Winter wheat, 95c bid September, 97c October.

Corn higher, 63¼ to 63½c September, 61¾ to 62¼c October, 58¾ to 59c November, 55¾ to 55¾c year, 49¾c January, 51⅝ to 51¾c May.

THE WAR OVER.

Arabi and Toulba Pashas Safe in Jail.

General Surrender of the Opposing Forces.

Cairo Occupied by Gen. Wolseley's Victorious Army.

The Rebel Troops Laying Down Arms Unconditionally.

The British Commander Received With Enthusiasm.

LONDON, Sept. 15.—Gen. Wolseley has arrived in Cairo, whence he sent the following official dispatch:

"CAIRO, Sept. 15.—The war is over! Send no more men from England! Midshipman Dechair is safe. I have been received here with open arms by all classes. The soldiers are glad to return to their homes. Our cavalry did extremely well in the long forced march yesterday."

ARABI PASHA SURRENDERS.

LONDON, Sept. 15.—The war office has received the following dispatch from Gen. Wolseley:

"BENHA, Sept. 15.—Gen. Lowe has occupied Cario. Arabi Pasha and Toulba Pasha have surrendered unconditionally. Ten thousand troops at Cairo have laid down their arms."

THE TWO PASHAS IN JAIL.

The following additional dispatch has been received from Gen. Wolseley:

"CAIRO, Sept. 15.—Arabi Pasha and Toulba Pasha are both confined in our guard-rooms. I will now change my base from Ismailia to Alexandria."

THE VANQUISHED.

ALEXANDRIA, Sept. 16.—News of the capture of Arabi Pasha was received by the Arabs here with what was apparently the wildest enthusiasm. Mahmoud Baroudi and Suleiman Sami, who commanded the battalion which took the leading part in the burning of Alexandria, were recalled from Salihiyeh by their friends, and fled to upper Egypt. Ali Fehmy and Raschid Pasha were not captured at Tel-el-Kebir, but it is believed they have since been arrested at Cairo. The enemy's troops from Mehallet, Aboukir, and Kafar-el-Dwar will parade at the front here with those from Mehallet, Sunday, when they will surrender their arms, be stripped of their military dress, and be disbanded in the presence of all the troops of Gen. Wood. In many instances wounded Arabs fired upon the English after they had passed them. Lord St. Vincent cut down a native standard-bearer and captured his colors. There were lamentable casualties on the enemy's side. Old men and children were killed. This was unavoidable, owing to the fact that the Egyptians kept up a straggling fire from their mud huts. This brought the English fire upon non-combatants. Without our siege train the position of Arabi Pasha at Kafar-el-Dwar was unassailable. Canned provisions for twenty thousand men for a month were captured at Tel-el-Kebir. The khedive did not receive Boutros Bey and the other delegates from Cairo, as they were merely the bearers of a letter from Arabi Pasha offering submission, and were not accredited by the notables as expected. After the arrival of the khedive at Cairo, a regularly constituted court will be established for the public trial of the rebel chiefs, who will be allowed to engage counsel.

It is believed that Malet, the British consul-general, has telegraphed Gen. Wolseley the names of seven persons answerable for the rebellion, and whose arrests are desirable.

ARABI BEFORE THE KHEDIVE.

After the engagement at Tel-el-Kebir, Arabi Pasha fled to Cairo, and told the council the troops had deserted him, upon which a mission was sent to the khedive with two letters from Arabi Pasha, one expressing his devotion, and the other warning him not to allow the English to enter Cairo, as the same results might follow as happened at Alexandria. The khedive refused to receive the letters. Arabi Pasha was taken before the khedive to-day. He presented a loathsome picture of groveling servility. He swore he had not been aware he was fighting against the khedive. The khedive remained standing while Arabi Pasha was in his presence. When Arabi had concluded, the khedive ordered his removal.

The Egyptian guns at Kafar-el-Dwar were cleverly concealed. Four of them were as large, if not larger, than those of the British. The garrison consisted of Arabi's best troops. The Tel-el-Kebir lot were recruits of not more than twenty days' service. Gen. Wood's brigade go to Cairo by rail.

PRISONERS.

TEL-EL-KEBIR, Sept. 16.—Twelve hundred prisoners have already marched back to Ismailia.

ISMAILIA, Sept. 16.—Twenty-seven Egyptian officers were brought in this morning.

ARABI.

An Egyptian doctor states that when Arabi Pasha was making off by railway to Zagazig he was fired at by one of his own officers. Another prisoner reports that Arabi was wounded. This is doubtful. Arabi Pasha surrendered to Gen. McPherson, saying: "I am Arabi Pasha. This is Toulba Pasha."

A SWORD OF HONOR.

DUBLIN, Sept. 16.—A general movement is afloat to present Gen. Wolseley with a sword of honor on his return from Egypt.

NEW YORK, Sept. 16.—A cable special from London says: There is great rejoicing everywhere over the news from the east. Wolseley's dispatch, "the war is over," is in every mouth, and the legend is displayed in all the shop windows. Flags are flying and great enthusiasm prevails. Sir Garnet Wolseley has redeemed the promise he made before leaving England that he would bring the war to a close by the 15th, and the announcement comes speedily from Egypt that "the war is over." It was a rash statement he made, and when the petty skirmishes were reported which seemed to be leading the British further into the interior, many were the sarcastic speeches and sardonic flings in the press over the general's boast. Sir Garnet Wolseley is not a favorite in army circles. He is young, and his advancement has been very rapid. His critics are many and alert, and they have improved the last few weeks to great advantage and at his expense. He has his revenge to-day. Cairo has opened her gates and the British general is there. The British flag floats over Kafr-el-Dwar, the Egyptian strongholds have been overcome, and the Egyptian soldiery who are not in the hands of the conquerors are scattered over the desert. Praise of the Scotch and Irish soldiers is heard in every mouth to-day. The charge of the Irish on the Egyptian left wing seems to have been as impetuous and as irresistible as O'Brien's at Fontenoy, where the "Irish stood with bloody plumes." A great deal of surprise is expressed at the complete manner in which the British wound up the campaign when the commanding general was ready to strike, and it is said in some quarters that the experience gained in the Ashantee, Afghan and Zulu campaigns greatly assisted Wolseley in this instance.

The Egyptian campaign has been like a powerful armored knight in full panoply against a weak, defenseless man, and over this victory the English nation is to-day mad with joy. Strong men are embracing themselves and kissing each other on the highway, as though a great nation had been subjugated. The public houses are overrun with crowds drinking and carousing, and business is almost generally suspended.

But in a day or two the more serious part of this Egyptian business will begin. It has already been noted that no one but the sultan has congratulated the English on their success. France, Germany and Russia maintain an ominous silence over a matter that concerns all Europe. This is regarded as of the highest significance, and the policy of the government already begins to be a subject of serious thought among the cooler heads.

"What will be done with Arabi" is another question that is already discussed. He has been proclaimed a rebel beyond the bounds of humanity, and has been turned over to the British as a prisoner of war. Some weeks ago it was said that he would be given a short shrift when the British got hold of him, but in the general elation of to-day no more of that is heard. England, which seems to like to have an elephant on its hands, has just got rid of Jumbo and Cetewayo, so that Arabi seems to come in at an opportune time. But the rejoicing is so great here to-day that there is little thought or concern over such details. It is enough for the populace that English arms have been again triumphant, and the power that dare resist it so quickly overcome.

BRAGG DEFEATED.

The Old Commander of the Iron Brigade Goes Down.

MILWAUKEE, Sept. 16.—The dead-lock at West Bend was broken yesterday by the nomination of Daniel H. Sumner, of Waukesha. The nomination was brought about by the Delaney men, who were joined by Charles T. Deissner, a wealthy Waukesha miller. The latter held a proxy for two votes, and the ballot stood: Sumner 16, Bragg 12. Sumner was declared nominated, amid shouts from the Delaney men, and consternation among the supporters of Bragg. The greatest excitement prevailed everywhere when the result became known. Bragg had gone home the night before in company with Henry Boland, to be present at the wedding of his daughter, and several of his leaders, including Capt. Mangan and A. K. Hamilton, were also absent. Bragg was en route from Fond du Lac to West Bend when the fatal ballot was taken and at Kewaskum had declared: "My boys will stand by me until frost comes. I shall be all right in due time. We have no need of hurrying." Upon reaching West Bend and hearing the result Bragg dropped his head, as if a pang of unbearable pain or shadow of overwhelming sorrow had struck him. He stood still for upward of a minute, and then moving along without lifting his heels from the platform, he remarked: "Well, I suppose it is all right," and disappeared in the depot.

Congressional Nominations Yesterday.

Republican congressional conventions put in nomination James B. Belford for Colorado and George M. Robeson in the First New Jersey district. The Democrats placed in the field David H. Sumner in the Second Wisconsin district, who received 16 votes to 12 for Bragg; Thomas H. Robertson in the Fourth Kentucky, after a session of three days, and William A. Duncan in the Nineteenth Pennsylvania. The Prohibitionists nominated Theodore D. Kanouse for the Sixth district of Wisconsin.

Ben Butler in the Field.

BOSTON, Sept. 16.—A report from very respectable sources is to the effect that Gen. Butler told a near political friend, yesterday, in answer to a direct question, that he had decided to accept the Democratic nomination, and would enter the campaign in good faith.

BOSTON, Sept. 16.—The Democrats of this city caucused to-night for convention delegates. Butler carried nearly every ward, and as the other cities and country towns have gone solidly for him, his nomination is a foregone conclusion. The convention will be held in this city on Tuesday.

A Bank in Trouble.

NEW YORK, Sept. 16.—Charles M. Wellington, cashier of the Manufacturers' National bank of Troy, New York, was recently discovered to be a defaulter for $27,000, which he had lost in Wall street. He transferred his entire property to the bank, and thus nearly covered the loss. Samuel O. Gleason, formerly county treasurer, was appointed cashier. Meantime, rumors that the bank was insolvent brought on a run, and nearly $80,000 was withdrawn yesterday. Aid having been tendered by other financial institutions, the peril is believed to be past.

The President Safe.

VINEYARD HAVEN, Mass., Sept. 16.—The United States steamer Dispatch, with President Arthur on board, arrived last night and remained at anchor until this morning, when she steamed westward.

The chief magistrate rode some miles to the telegraph office in a farmer's wagon, and then sailed for New York by steamer.

A Tight Money Market.

NEW YORK, Sept. 16.—In Wall street the rate for money ranged yesterday from 6 to 10 per cent., the latter price having been bid at the close. St. Paul stock, ex-privilege and dividend, broke to 116¾ for common and 122¾ for preferred; Northern Pacific preferred fell to 98¾, and Manitoba receded 6½ points.

B. Gratz Brown's Tour.

INDIANAPOLIS, Sept. 16.—B. Gratz Brown, who has been speaking in Indiana, reports the masses almost unanimously in favor of prohibitory legislation, many of the largest Democratic counties being in favor of enforced temperance.

Yellow Fever.

GALVESTON, Sept. 16.—Thousands of Mexicans are known to have been stricken with yellow fever in the region along the Rio Grande, between Mier and Matamoras. Forty new cases and five deaths are reported in the former city, and six patients closed their sufferings at the latter place.

He Wanted to Go Over the Falls.

BUFFALO, Sept. 16.—At Niagara Falls last evening a man entered the gate at Prospect park and informed two ladies that he was about to commit suicide. He leaped into the rapids, but was lassoed just as he reached the brink of the falls. He spent the night in a cell.

Independent Republicans.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 16.—The Independent Republicans opened the campaign by a mass meeting at Horticultural hall, where addresses were made by John Stewart and Charles S. Wolfe.

Canadian Exodusters.

TORONTO, Sept. 16.—The flight of French Canadians to the United States is a subject which has received due consideration at Ottawa, and the governor general has expressed a willingness to assist in colonizing them in the northwest.

Tammany's Position.

NEW YORK, Sept. 16.—John Kelly says that if Tammany hall is admitted to the New York Democratic state convention it will support the ticket; if rejected it will take time to consider what is the best course to pursue.

Cornell's Chances.

NEW YORK, Sept. 16.—According to present indications, Gov. Cornell will come within thirty votes of securing a majority in the state convention. Judge Folger will lack ninety votes of a majority.

Trade.

NEW YORK, Sept. 16.—There has been a good general trade during the past week. The stock market is active, but cotton is unsettled, and the prices of provisions are tending downward.

At Creedmoor.

NEW YORK, Sept. 16.—The international rifle match at Creedmoor resulted in a victory for the British team at every range, the total score being 1,975 to 1,805.

Unworthy Influence.

Many persons are prejudiced against proprietary medicines. They do not know why. Many narrow-minded doctors condemn them without knowing or caring to know in the least about them—solely through principle and self-interest. These are mostly young and inexperienced in practice. "Prejudice is strong where the judgment is weak." Many physicians, with better and more liberal ideas and education, endorse those remedies which they find most efficacious for the diseases for which they are recommended. One of these, strongly endorsed, and coming into popular use, for the Liver and Dyspepsia, is ZOPESA. 8 oz. bottles 75c, 6 dr. 10c. Sold by Prentice & Evenson.

ANOTHER DEFALCATION.

Assistant Cashier Lathrop, of the Jersey Central Road, Steals Forty Thousand Dollars.

BOSTON, Mass., Sept. 16.—A special from New York says: It is reported at the office of the Central railroad of New Jersey that Dwight S. Lathrop, assistant cashier, has absconded, after appropriating $40,000 of the company's money. He was appointed by the late Judge Lathrop, his uncle, who was then receiver. Investigation was begun lately, and a week ago a deficit of at least $40,000 was discovered. Lathrop then disappeared, accompanied by a woman he had been living with on Staten Island. His plan was to alter the deposit ticket on his way to the bank, and deduct the difference in money, at the same time falsifying the books to cover his irregularities.

A Railroad to Hudson's Bay.

ST. PAUL, Minn., Sept. 16.—A Winnipeg special to The Pioneer-Press says: A party of civil engineers, consisting of C. S. Matheson, H. A. Jinkes, and Nichol leave to-morrow for Hudson's bay to take preliminary soundings and lines of the new Hudson's Bay railway, of which Gen. Rosser has been appointed chief engineer. Work will commence at Churchill, and proceed in this direction. The party will go out in Gen. Rosser's boat, which will be towed by the steamer New Brunswick as far as she goes, and the remainder of the journey will be accomplished by rowing. Final surveys of the line will not be commenced until next spring. All the stock for the proposed railway from the boundary through Emerson to Portage La Prairie has been subscribed, and proper steps will be taken at once to secure a charter under the Provincial railway act.

Colorado Republicans.

DENVER, Sept. 16.—The Teller and Tabor faction of the Republican party carried the state convention by nominating Earnest L. Campbell, of Leadville, for governor and William H. Meyer, for governor.

James B. Belford was nominated for congress on the second ballot by a large majority.

Melvin Edwards, of Summitt, was nominated for secretary of state; Fred Walsen, of Huerfano, for state treasurer; John Abbott, of Larimar, for auditor; D. F. Urmy, of Pueblo, for attorney-general; J. B. Chaffee, chairman of the state central committee.

Resolutions were adopted of regret at the death of Garfield and endorsing the course of President Arthur; thanks for the calling of Henry M. Teller to the secretaryship of the interior; denouncing the demonetization of silver and recommending the apportionment of funds arising from the sale of public lands to the sinking of artesian wells in Colorado.

Attempt to Wreck a Train on the Wabash Road.

WABASH, Ind., Sept. 16.—Another attempt to wreck a Wabash railroad train was made three miles east of this city Tuesday night, but fortunately the express was an hour late, and two young men who were walking up the track discovered and removed the obstructions just a few moments previous to the coming of the train. The would-be wreckers had placed half of a bar of railway iron in a cattle-guard, and, had the engine struck it, a fearful catastrophe would have resulted.

Jail Birds Fly Away.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Sept. 16.—The prisoners in the jail recently manufactured two skeleton keys from sheet lead and made a rope from blankets. Early yesterday morning, as a turnkey came in to extinguish the gas, three men threw him into a cell, and bound and gagged him. A revolver was placed at his temple, but one man saved his life. Seven jail birds then unlocked the back door, battered down a gate with a stick of timber, and made their escape.

The Tariff Commission.

DES MOINES, Sept. 16.—The Tariff commission opened at Des Moines yesterday. Henry J. Philpott read an argument in favor of free trade. A paper prepared by Charles E. Russel, of Davenport, stated that under a high tariff, the woolen mills of Iowa have diminished one-half in ten years. Hon. J. B. Grinnell said he did not know of an intelligent farmer in the state who was a free trader. S. J. Loughran urged that the policy of protection should be a permanent one.

Capt. Mayne Reid.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 16.—The famous Capt. Mayne Reid to-day received a pension from our government of $15 per month on account of wounds received when a second lieutenant of a New York regiment at Chapultepec in the Mexican war. His application has been pending for two years. His papers show that he is now living in England on a small rented farm, and is quite poor.

Keyes' Delegates Bolting.

MONROE, Wis., Sept. 16.—The delegations from Green and Dane counties, with the exception of Stickney, on the refusal of the convention to adjourn until to-day to enable them to consider the questions involved by the admission of Hazleton delegates from Dane county, seceded, and organized a convention of their own. The bolters will probably nominate Keyes to-day.

The Hillsdales Beaten.

LONDON, Sept. 16.—In the international rowing contest yesterday, the Hillsdale crew took the lead of the Thames club. Half a mile from the starting point a serious foul occurred, but the Hillsdales got three lengths ahead, when Capt. Terwilliger's slide broke, which disabled the Americans, the British beating by fourteen seconds.

A Lynching in South Carolina.

CHARLESTON, S. C., Sept. 16.—A negro named Nathan Bonnet, who entered the house of a white citizen at Williston, and attempted to rape his daughter, was taken from jail Wednesday night by lynchers, who over-powered the jailer. Bonnet, who had confessed his guilt, was immediately hanged and his body riddled with bullets.

The Doctor Changed His Mind.

WARSAW, Ind., Sept. 16.—A few weeks since Dr. J. S. Smith, of this place, was divorced from his wife; then followed an apparent reconciliation and a promise to remarry, but Thursday morning he led to the altar another lady, and the gossips are much excited at the turn events have taken.

A Political Murder.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 16.—J. B. Campbell, Republican nominee for sheriff of Sierra county, California, was shot dead by a man named Stubbs, for whom two hundred men are scouring the county. The murder is attributed solely to the bitterness of the political struggle.

They Pillaged the Town.

NEW YORK, Sept. 16.—When the Chilian forces evacuated Tarma, a large majority of the Peruvian families accompanied them for fear of depredations by guerillas. It is stated that within five hours a body of 3,000 Indians poured in, and pillaged and burnt the town.

A Cat Kills an Infant.

PITTSBURG, Sept. 16.—Anton Pelata awoke yesterday morning to find his babe dead in bed with a large black cat sitting on its breast. The coroner held an inquest, and the jury formally declared the cat to be the destroyer of the infant.

Fatal Boiler Explosion.

MILWAUKEE, Sept. 16.—The boiler in the stave factory of Daniel Jones, at Appleton, Wis., exploded with such force as to kill one man and fatally injure two others.

Kidney Complaint Cured.

B. Turner, Rochester, N. Y., writes: "I have been for over a year subject to serious disorder of the kidneys, and often unable to attend to business; I procured your BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS and was relieved before half a bottle was used. I intend to continue, as I feel confident that they will entirely cure me" Price $1.00

REAL ESTATE FOR SALE.

REAL ESTATE TO EXCHANGE

H. H. BLANCHARD,

The Real Estate Broker of Janesville, deals more extensively in Real Estate than any other Real Estate agent in Southern Wisconsin. He buys, sells, exchanges and rents Real Estate. He has in his list a great number of large and small farms, in Rock Co., some with cheap improvements, and not so well located, and some with valuable improvements and excellently located for sale or exchange. Likewise some timber lots, one near the city.

His city property list is large, comprising some thirty Houses and Lots, with prices ranging from $500 to $5,000. Also a large quantity of Western lands, and a large number of Western improved farms for sale or to exchange.

If you wish to buy, sell or exchange Real Estate, or acquire any information pertaining thereto, call on him at his office and he will gladly and faithfully render any service in his power.

He deals on the square, and guarantees perfect titles on all property sold by him. Office hours 9 to 12 o'clock A. M., 8 to 10 o'clock P. M.

IF you place your real estate in my hands to sell, you will not be required to sign a contract containing a 90-day or any other unconscionable provision.

H. A. PATTERSON, P. M.

A Life Depending Upon the Dice.

This story is authentic. It is found in the memoirs of a Prussian officer of distinction, who gives a simple, unaffected narrative of the scenes and events through which he passed, and who betrays nowhere the least disposition to exaggerate. The following remarkable incident he gives as it came under his own observation. He was at the time on the staff of Gen. Winterfield, one of the most skillful and competent captains of his day; and Winterfield was the General in command at the time spoken of.

Two soldiers had been condemned to death. In a drunken condition at night they had assaulted an officer of the line, and one of them had drawn a knife upon him, but he could not positively say which of the twain held it. And the men themselves did not know. Neither of them remembered anything about it. So both of them were condemned to be shot.

They were both excellent soldiers, and only one of them had been guilty of using a weapon.

The officers of the division, including him who had been assaulted, asked that the men might be pardoned. At length Winterfield said he would pardon one of them. Only one had held a knife, and only that one ought to die. He would pardon one, and the men must themselves decide which of them should be shot.

How should the decision be made?

"Let us shake the dice," said one of the condemned.

And the other agreed to it. And anon it was agreed to by all interested. The two men took their places by the side of a big drum, and were to throw the dice upon its head. Two dice were given them and a proper box for shaking.

The first man threw two sixes. He groaned in agony. He felt that he had consigned his comrade to death.

But when the second came to throw he also threw two sixes. "Wonderful!" cried the lookers-on. They were ordered to shake and throw again.

This time the second man threw first—two aces. "Ho! good! You will live, Peter." But when Peter came to throw the dice presented those same two aces. And now the beholders were wonder-stricken indeed.

Another throw was ordered, and Peter threw a five and a deuce. The other threw—five, deuce. After the excitement had again subsided the men shook once more. The first threw two fours. "Oh! now throw fives, and save yourself, Peter." Peter throw—two fours.

At this point the Colonel ordered them to stop. He went and reported the marvelous result to Winterfield. Said he: "Clearly, General, Providence will have those two men to be saved."

And saved they were. The General cared not to oppose the wonderful fate of the dice. It did seem providential, and so he accepted it.

And the redeemed soldiers lived to prove that the saving fate had given back to Prussia two of the very best and bravest of her sons.

The Chief Wheat-Raising State.

According to the census reports of 1860, 1870 and 1880 Illinois outranks every other State in the Union in the amount of wheat raised. According to the reports of the United States Commissioner of Agriculture, during the eleven years beginning with 1870 and including 1880, Illinois took the first rank in quantity of wheat raised in 1870, 1871, 1879 and 1880. California led in '72, '76 and '78, and Iowa in '73, '74, '75 and '77. Illinois held the second place every time that she was not first, except in 1877, when Minnesota led, and in 1878, when Indiana was second. The following table, carefully compiled from the reports of the United States Commissioner of Agriculture, shows the wheat crops of Illinois, Iowa and California for the eleven years ending with 1880, expressed in thousands of bushels:

Years.	Illinois.	Iowa.	California.
1870	27,726	20,345	14,175
1871	25,314	18,100	16,757
1872	27,771	22,089	25,000
1873	29,417	31,609	21,504
1874	30,122	33,008	28,380
1875	27,300	29,800	23,800
1876	23,440	17,600	30,000
1877	33,000	37,813	22,000
1878	31,920	30,449	41,990
1879	41,808	32,786	35,000
1880	40,038	33,178	33,877
Total	360,394	311,049	293,583

The above totals show that in the total amount of wheat raised in the period designated Illinois leads, Iowa stands second and California third. The average crop per annum in Illinois for these eleven years was 32,761,326 bushels; in Iowa, 28,277,186 bushels; in California, 26,643,964 bushels.

Diseases of the Kidneys.

A knowledge of Chemistry is essential to every physician. It not only aids him in ascertaining conditions and changes in many diseases, but is the only true resource in diagnosing all complaints of the kidneys. He finds many difficulties with similar symptoms as those in diseases of the kidneys, and his chemistry must be his discriminator. Then, again, many times chemistry will tell us we have too much of an alkaline or acid condition, and in so doing name our treatment. Now, it is a fact that two-thirds of the difficulties coming under the notice of the specialist of chronic diseases is due directly to an abnormal condition of the excretory organs. Right here it might be well to mention briefly these organs and their functions. Commencing with the bowels we find an outlet for all the unnecessary solids of the body. The kidneys and skin serves as channels by which the superfluous fluid constituents are discharged, while the lungs expel the poisonous carbonic acid gas, admitting in its stead the life-giving gas, oxygen. Any means, it matters not what, that impedes the normal functions of these organs, alone or together, saws the seed from which to reap a goodly harvest of disease. The urine is one of the most, if not the most complex fluid of the body. It is analysed in three prominent ways, viz: optically, microscopically and chemically. We adopt the same mode in analysing as in the analysis of mineral waters. The healthy urine is of an amber-yellow color, has a temperature of 97 degrees or of the body, and possess a decided acid reaction. If we leave the urine standing for sometime we will perceive a cloud-like substance in the bottom of the vessel—this is mucus. Soon after this change, by testing with the litmus paper, we find there is no longer any acid reaction, but an alkaline. Now, these are no indication of disease. This mucus is derived from the genito-urinary tract, the alkalinity being due to the presence of carbonate of ammonia formed by decomposition. On the other hand, suppose you realize these changes on first urinating, then they indicate some diseased condition. The ordinary ingredients of the urine are uropheine, indican, urea, uric acid, chlorides, sulphates earthy and alkaline phosphates. Taking each in the order named we find that uropheine undergoes a change in Bright's disease and in acute and chronic forms of inflammation of the bladder. Indican changes in hyperæmia and Bright's disease; urea in diabetes, cholera and Bright's disease; uric acid in urinary calculi and gout; chlorides in but a few diseases; sulphates in all acute, chronic and congestive stages; phosphates changes generally similar to chlorides. There are many more diseases which we could add, in fact we could go on through the whole category of diseases and find in all some change in these above ingredients, some decreased, others increased. With all these diseased conditions there are many changes in the urine which is in perfect health, and yet resembles the gravest difficulties. Let us take the most simple examples. Suppose at dinner you eat of substances plentiful in alkalies, during the afternoon you will find the urine is of an alkaline reaction. Again, in warm weather when the pores of the skin are well dilated and you are perspiring freely you then find the urine scanty, high color and a high specific gravity. This is due to the increased work of the skin accomplishing some of the work belonging to the kidneys, and thus concentrating the urine. In cold weather, however, we find just the opposite, the pores of the skin contracted, the kidneys now doing the large part of the work and the urine plenty, of a low specific gravity and a pale color. All this within the bounds of health and yet in fevers the urine has a similar appearance as the warm weather urine, while in diabetes we find a similarity to the cold weather urine. From the above we will observe that the kidneys are the principal excreting organs of the body, eliminating as they do more waste matter than any other organ, thereby illustrating their importance and showing their secretion to be the great health and strength indicator of the body. Although we have shown that every change noticed in the urine is not one of disease, yet we wish to impress upon all the necessity of attention to these organs, and to at once consult some intelligent physician concerning the first change noticed, as substance is visible only by means of a high power microscope soon become the size of an egg.

We have made our visits regularly for years, and shall for years continue to do so, and will be for consultation upon all diseases of the lungs, liver, heart, throat, stomach, nerves and blood, on our next visit at the Myers House, in this city, on Saturday and Sunday, the 7th and 8th of October.

ESTABLISHED OVER THIRTY YEARS.

SPECIFICATIONS for grading that portion of Terrace street, between Ravine and Washington street, in the First Ward.

FIRST, Said Terrace street is to be graded its full width, from Ravine street to Washington street, in conformity with the grade of said street, filed in the office of the City Engineer, May 8th, 1871, and accepted and established by the Common Council, May 21, 1871.

SECOND, The side walks of said street are to be fourteen (14) feet wide, and they are to be graded in conformity with the grade of the center line of said street, modified by the grades of the sidewalks of the streets crossing said Terrace street within the limits above specified, so that the sidewalks of said street, and the sidewalks of streets crossing the same, within the limits herein specified, may properly conjoin. The inner margins of the sidewalks of said street are to be so graded as to be uniformly six (6) inches below their outer margins, the slope between their outer and inner margins being uniform.

THIRD, The side drains are to be located next adjacent to the sidewalks, the inner margins of the sidewalks and the outer margins of the drains forming one and the same line the bottoms of the side drains on a line eighteen (18) inches in from and parallel to the inner margins of the side walks are to be uniformly fifteen (15) inches below the sidewalks at their inner margins, and is to be on uniform slope from the top of the sidewalks as graded at their inner margins to the bottoms of the side drains, graded as above designated.

FOURTH, The street proper, or road-bed, shall be graded so as to crown uniformly in the arc of a circle from the bottom of the side drains to the grade of the street at its center line.

FIFTH, The earth excavated in grading said street within the limits above specified, shall be placed in the required embankments, and shall be measured and paid for in excavation only. If there is any excess of earth excavated in grading said street, within the limits above specified, over and above what is required to make the embankments within said limits, or if there is not sufficient earth excavated in grading said street, within said limits, to make the embankments required in said limits; then in the first case such excess of earth, not required in embankments, shall be removed from said street by the contractor and deposited elsewhere; and in the second case the contractor shall procure elsewhere such amount of earth as may be required in embankment, over and above that furnished by excavation in grading said street within the limits herein specified; and there shall be no extra charge made or allowed from the removal from said street of such excess of earth, or for procuring elsewhere such lack of earth, as the case may be; but the price paid per cubic yard for excavation in grading said street shall cover the whole cost thereof; provided, however, that if there is more earth required in embankment than is furnished by excavation in grading said street within said limits, then the contractor, for such earth procured elsewhere to complete the embankments, shall receive the same price per cubic yard of earth measured in excavation, as he receives per cubic yard of earth excavated in said street and no more.

SIXTH, The work shall be done under the supervision of, and in a manner satisfactory to the City Engineer, and as he shall direct, and it shall be completed within such time as may be specified in the contract.

SEVENTH, After the grading of such street shall have been completed, it shall be kept in good condition by the contractor for a reasonable time, that the Aldermen of the First ward may take action in the personal acceptance of the same.

EIGHTH, All proposals to be sealed, and to state the price per cubic yard at which the work will be done, and to be addressed to the City Clerk.

EDWARD RUGER,
City Engineer.

Dated September 9, 1882.

NOTICE.

NOTICE is hereby given that at the regular meeting of the Common Council of the city of Janesville, to be held September 25th, 1882, said council will proceed to act in relation to the work mentioned in the foregoing specifications, all of the above mentioned work to be completed on or before November 1, 1882, and until the time of said meeting of the Council, sealed proposals for the performance of said work will be received by the City Clerk.

Cole's Veterinary Carbolisalve is always soft, easily applied and superior to any liniment for stable use. It will cure any case of scratches, speed crack, or cracked heel. For reducing inflammation, and as a cure for cuts, wounds, galls and sores, it has no equal. Pound cans, $1.00; small cans, 50 cents.

TO THE PUBLIC—I would respectfully remind the public, that within a very few days my cigar and tobacco establishment, on West Milwaukee street, will be opened with a complete stock of smoker's materials. No care or expense has been spared in fitting up a place, superior to anything in Janesville and rivaling in point of artistic excellence the finest emporiums in the country. I deal in nothing but the very best articles, using only the purest brands of cigars manufactured from the best leaf grown. My stock of goods will include everything pertaining to the business, and will be equal in every respect to the most noted places of the kind in the North, West or East. My aim shall be to please and satisfy my customers, and a long experience, justifies me in the belief that my efforts will be successful. Call and examine for yourselves.

Briefiets.

—The Y. M. C. A. service to-morrow will be held in the Jackson street M. E. church at 3:30 in the afternoon.

—The usual Saturday afternoon crowd is in the city, all the farmers feeling happy at the fullness of their crops.

—The Janesville Mutuals were not themselves yesterday, and suffered a defeat at Whitewater by a score of 15 to 5.

—Messrs. Stark Brothers, of Milwaukee, are regaling the eyes of the public with a magnificent assortment of new and splendid carpet patterns. Their velvet carpets are particularly handsome and attractive, and possess the great merit of being sold at bottom prices.

—The herd of prize horses owned by the Galbraith brothers, arrived here this morning and were taken this afternoon to Chicago, to compete for premiums in the greates horse fair ever held in this country. They took the sweepstakes premium at Fond du Lac yesterday, for the best herd of horses of any breed.

—Little Corinne the child wonder of the world, and her company of merry-makers, will undoubtedly be welcomely received by a large audience at Lappin's hall next Monday night. The company will produce the Mascotte, a comic opera rippling with pretty arias, and humorous situations, and which is one of the best drawing comic operas now being presented to the public.

—The music rendered by Smith and Slocum's orchestra last night, between the acts of Faust, was unusually good. A clarionet solo "Coming thro' the rye" with variations was exquisitely played and brought out rounds of applause. Prof. Titcomb accompanied on the piano and the organ, when the Orpheus club were giving the choruses.

—There will be another lawn tennis game at the residence of Mr. J. A. Leland this afternoon, Mr. Frederick Leland, will act as preceptor of those who participate in the delightful out door pastime, and who are not adepts in the game. A glorious time was enjoyed at the game played yesterday afternoon, and it looks as if there will soon be many purchasers of lawn tennis sets in Janesville.

—Among the many notable articles in the domestic department of the State fair which were awarded first premium is one which is deserving of more than passing notice, that of a rag carpet, woven by Barbara Fontane, and inmate of the blind asylum in this city. The lady is totally blind, and the piece of work exhibited was a masterpiece in its line. Among twelve competitors Miss Fontaine was awarded first premium for the beauty and skill shown in her work.

—An addition which will doubtless be a pleasing convenience to the guests and the general public, has been made to the Pember house, by placing a bar-room in the rear, a little to the side, of the office. The bar is presided over by Mr. M. E. Waite, who is a connoisseur in good liquors, and has stocked his neat little saloon with the best. Mr. Waite has fixed up his bar in a most inviting manner, so that it is just the place to take a quiet sip "of something soothing." Give him as many calls as you like. He is receiving at all hours.

—The Myers Opera house will be occupied next Monday night by Webb's mammoth minstrel party, who give a first class minstrel entertainment. The troupe has acquired a most enviable reputation all over the country, and is no itinerant combination without a name. Their reputation has preceded them, and lovers of the fun, frolic and dancing of a good minstrel performance, will have no better opportunity of gratifying their taste this season, than by attending the show at the Opera house next Monday night.

—People now in the Northwest who came from London, St. Thomas, Hamilton, Toronto, Kingston, Montreal and intermediate points, have a splendid opportunity to visit home on September 18th, as all the railroads in the Northwest will run a grand cheap excursion by way of the Michigan Central Railroad to those points. Train leaves Winnipeg on September 18th, and leaves Chicago on September 20th. Three trains from Chicago, via Michigan Central, at 9 a. m., 5:15 p. m., and 9:10 p. m. The rates are exceedingly low.

THE CIRCUS AT HOME.

An Inspection of the Menagerie in its Winter Quarters.

The Elephants and Lions have a Soft Time, and the Hippopotamus Indulges in a Swim.

What They Do.

"Would you like to see the animals?" asked Mr. W. M. Thompson, who is in charge of that portion of the Big United States circus, recently purchased by Col. Barr Robbins, in Louisville. The reporter signifying his assent, Mr. Thompson added, "Then come with me." Under his ciceronage a complete tour was made of that portion of Spring Brook farm reserved for the winter quarters of the animals. There is everything on the place, which could tend to the comfort of the animals, and protect them from the inclemency of the weather. Large, almost air-tight barns, provided with heating apparatus to keep up a temperature suited to the nature of the animals, the greater portion of which come from the jungles of Africa, Asia, or South America. The northern hemisphere, too, has its representatives in this incongruous assemblage of beasts, birds and amphibia, which make up the menagerie. All are attended to with equal care.

Ranged along a fence which made the enclosure of about an acre and a half of ground, were a number of cages.

"Here Pete, stir yourself!" commandingly said Mr. Thompson, and a splendid jaguar, rose from his wooden couch in a corner of the cage, and growled a welcome.

"Get on—get on! what's the matter with you?" and the keeper thrusting his hand through a small door bestowed a sharp blow with his fist, on the ribs of the Brazilian beauty. One or two more raps were administered and the somnolently inclined animal retaliated by slapping his disturber with a paw, and leaving a perceptible scratch on the wrist, from which the blood slowly trickled.

"Here Kit! come George! Stir yourselves, I say!" and a huge lion and lioness, leaped to opposite ends of their cage. The lion had a bad eye, its seeing power having been destroyed by an accident, but its pale blue lustreless gaze inspired more terror than did his good optic, which semed more than half disposed to close in slumber. Leaving these shaggy products of South Africa, a visit was paid to the Bengal tiger, a magnificent specimen of the genus felis, and said to be the finest and largest in captivity. Passing this noble scion of India's terror, the striped hyena was called upon.

"Ah Loo! How are you to-day?" pleasantly inquired the cicerone. For answer the hideous looking animal bristled her back hair, like porcupine quills, and snarled. The reporter suggested that her hair be banged or put up in papers over night and worked into frizzes next morning.

"Yes, a saratoga wave, or a white cap' would set off that sneaky eye of hers, most elegantly, and give tone to that carnivorous smile, but here's the darling."

"The darling" was a still more hideous hyena of the spotted species. A most repulsive gleam from his eyes greeted this compliment, the animal looking as if he would like to embrace the flatterer and chew off a piece of his upper lip, or gobble up the whole man. Leaving these, a fine lioness was called upon. She did not appear inclined to receive visitors, and was evidently very averse to the attention paid to her family. This family consisted of three cubs, twice the size of the largest maltese cats. True to their nature, the little ones, exhibited their hereditary ferocity, in several most vicious yelps, occasionly supplemented with a hoarse growl from the mother. They were ugly little devels, not at all inviting as pets, and the reporter thought how completely he could have been avenged, if he had had these spiteful, pets to have thrown to the last minstrel show, in lieu of boquets. Roaming in a field not far off were a couple of camels, the personification of mildness and patience, and chained to a centre pole, in a building near by were two splendid elephants.

"Here Jennie shake," Jennie, the female elephant was not in a shaking mood, but she stepped up and welcomed the visitors with a species of snort, that sounded like a trombone with a bad cold.

"Now Baldy, old boy, show yourself, come here sir."

"Baldy? I thought his name was Duke," interrupted a small boy, one of an open-mouthed crowd, who had followed Mr. Thompson and the reporter.

"No, his name's Baldy. We changed it."

At any rate, Baldy recognized his new appellation and curling his trunk, produced a "shoot!" which made the pole tremble, and the small boys scamper.

Another building was then inspected. Here, the bears indolently lolled about in very circumscribed apartments, and the kangaroos looked as if they would set 'em up, for the privilege of taking just one hop, skip and a jump outside of their narrow confines. Above these were stationed the monkeys, chattering apes, who would not chatter a chatter for anything. They had probably got hoarse amusing a different kind of a "dear public" from that which Mlle. Patti, so loved to speak of caressingly. But if these original links did not express their pleasure or displeasure, they evidently kept up a chain of most connected thought. Every solitary monkey, were he or she of the simiidae, cebidae, or lemuridae group, was clinging to the iron bars of the cage which confined them, and peering through the interstices, gazed greedily upon the canaries, cockatoos, and other feathered inhabitants of the aviary.

Looking from the rear of this house, the sacred ox, a yak, a zebra, an antelope or two, and a few chamois could be distinguished browsing among the clover, oblivious to all their surroundings, and apparently surfeited with adulation so often received from curious thousands, who recklessly squandered a half dollar per head, for the privilege. Not one of these innocents seemed to be conscious of a remembrance that a minister had ever been near them, to show the children the animals, while he watched the somersaults through a paper balloon, of a ganzily attired female. The best sight of all was reserved for the last. A pond, of considerable dimensions, occupies a prominent place on the farm. In this pond was floundering a huge hippopotamus, looking for all the world like the fabled serpent of the sea. Mr. Thompson tried to coax the beast out of his element, but the old reprobate, or to call him by the simple name given him in natural history, the pachydermatous mammal, positively refused to be coaxed. He winked, however, a sweet style of Chicago Tribune, Ethel McCarthy wait-till-mother's-gone wink, which said as plainly as words could "Nixy weeden cully—I'v got too soft a snap."

The show was over, the animals alone constituting the attraction. The clowns were nowhere to be seen, the ring master instead of announcing "Mlle. Rospetliozi" will perform her wonderful feat of balancing with her left toe on a wild, untamed bare backed steed, and turning a double back action flip-flap," was most probably entertaining some gaping crowd in a small town with the miraculous virtues of a patent medicine. The horses were all out on farms, calmly filling themselves up with clover, possibly glad to escape the inspiring "Ge—up"—"y—eap" and "hi! hi!" of their riders. Instead of these, the reporter was kindly shown by Mr. Spencer Alexander a stable of fine looking mules, not circus mules, however, but good plodding every day mules, with an eye to business in getting away with oats.

Last Nights' Dramatic Event.

The young ladies and gentlemen who presented Faust, at the Opera House last night, received a most flattering testimonial from the audience. The parquette and dress circle were filled with a cultured company, pleased to render praise where praise was due, and encourage where encouragement was needed. Faust is one of those dramatic creations full of poetry, human feeling and passion which when read absorbs all interest, and engages the deepest sympathy. It is of too stilted a character, too much like Manfred or the Greek play, to be given to ordinary audiences. While Manfred will ever remain a magnificent creation, fraught with literary merit and dramatic power, a bright gem in Byron's lettered crown, yet it has long been relegated to obscurity by the profession for whom it was written. So, too, with Faust. Replete with poetic fervor, exalted thought and an absorbing intensity the world will continue to read, admire and shower encomiums, as it has done, upon Goethe, who gave us so brilliant a revelation, but its inadaptability to the the stage is undoubted. It is only when the language is clothed in music, when Mephisto hisses his temptings in song, Faust breathes his burning love through Gounod's medium, and when Marguerita warbles her hopes, and aspirations to heaven, or despairingly appeals in music to a forgiving deity, for remission from a sin committed in excess of love for one of His creatures. Then it is that Goethe's grand and gloomy dream, receives its divine interpretation, which ungilded words alone, fail in commensurately giving.

An astonishing feature of last night's entertainment is, that amateurs could be induced to essay a drama so difficult of rendition, and still more astonishing that it should have been given as well as it was. We do not propose to comment upon the performance, our judgment is that of only one of the several hundred who witnessed the play and appeared pleased. Still, we will venture to say, that of the many amateur performances, it has been our privilege to attend, we never saw one, everything considered, given better. Miss Guernsey as Marguerita, gave promise of great attainments, and though already a reader of exceptional power, she forgets in her devotion to elocution her duty to the portraiture she presents. In the jail scene, where crazed by the infamy heaped upon her, tortured memory struggles to drown a horrible remembrance, she is too uniform. It is only by strict attention to the language that the auditor distinguishes the occasional gleams of sanity. She neglects to delineate by action the changes from a demented condition to one of returned consciousness, where love and the realization of her infamy contend for supremacy. One drives her to despair, and she prays for forgetfulness, a surcease in death, the other bids her live while she showers endearment upon her betrayer. In this most powerful scene, Miss Guernsey makes the actress secondary to the reader, but with a little attention the error may be easily remedied, as she unmistakably has the perception, talent and power to make the actress a splendid medium for her rare declamatory ability.

Dr. M. A. Newman made a creditable Mephisto and shared the honors with Miss Guernsey, the only fault being that the Doctor is too innocent and good natured to get a perfect conception of Mephisto whose face is adorned with an ever present leer or sardonic smile, and whose greed for souls, keeps him at the heels of his victim, pouring into the unfortunate ear, his specious sophistry and tempting allurements.

Mr. J. B. Doe Jr. as Faust gave a good reading with Miss Guernsey and Dr. Newman received some flattering encomiums. The other ladies and gentlemen who played minor parts acquitted themselves excellantly, and as a whole the performance was a great credit to those interested.

The performance will be repeated tonight in a much improved shape, as the performers have broken the ice, and will be more at their ease.
